Keep Food "Cool for the Summer" to Avoid Foodborne Illness

One of the best things about the summer is finally getting to enjoy the warm weather outside! Backyard barbecues and picnics can be a great way to get outside, but rising temperatures can also bring food safety risks. During warm weather it's important to make sure your food is safe by keeping it "cool for the summer."

Normally, perishable foods can be left out for only two hours before they need to be chilled or discarded. That keeps your food out of the "Danger Zone" for too long; germs that cause foodborne illness can grow rapidly in temperatures between 40°F (4°C) and 140°F (60°C). But in the summer, hot and humid weather creates an ideal environment for bacteria to grow even more quickly. When the temperature outside is above 90°F (32°C), food is only safe outside for one hour. Here are some tips to keep your food "cool for the summer" and avoid foodborne illness.

1. Keep it Cool:

When you're serving food outside, extra cold sources are needed to keep everything out of the "Danger Zone." Pack coolers with bags of ice, gel packs, or frozen water bottles to keep your food cold for as long as possible.

2. Pack it Tight:

Full coolers will keep your perishable foods cold and safe for much longer than half full ones. If you can't fill your cooler, pack it with extra ice to take up more space.

3. Open and Close it Quick:

When you're having fun in the sun, you may want a nice, cold drink to stay cool. Because beverage coolers tend to be opened more frequently, keep your drinks in a separate cooler from your perishable foods. For snacks, only take out what you need at a time, and keep the rest chilling for later. And never leave your cooler open for long!

4. When in Doubt, Throw it Out!

If food has been out for a while, it may not be safe to repack and eat later. Don't hesitate to throw anything away that might have been left out in the sun for too long

July Observances

UV Safety Awareness Month

Ultraviolet (UV) rays are an invisible kind of radiation that comes from the sun, tanning beds, and sunlamps. UV rays can penetrate and change skin cells.

Overexposure to UV rays from the sun during the summer months (when we are often outside for extended periods of time) can cause severe skin and eye injuries, including sunburn, skin cancer, cataracts, macular degeneration, and growths on our eyes - including cancer. In the continental U.S., the hours between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. are the most hazardous for UV exposure and are at their greatest intensity during the late spring and early summer.

Tips for Protecting Our Skin Against UV ray overexposure:

1. Use sunscreen with an SPF of 30 or higher, and reapply regularly.
 2. Seek shade during peak hours (between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.).
 3. Wear protective clothing such as long sleeve shirts, wide-brimmed hats, and sun glasses.
 4. See a dermatologist and get an annual skin check to detect any early signs of skin cancer

Mosquito-Borne Disease Awareness

Although July is not an official awareness month, LA County would like to highlight mosquito borne diseases as they are more prevalent during the summer months. Some of these common mosquito borne diseases are:

- West Nile Virus - The leading cause of mosquito-borne disease in the continental US. Most people with West Nile Virus do not develop symptoms, but about 1 in 5 will experience fever, headache, body aches, vomiting, diarrhea, or rash. Severe cases can lead to neurological illness.
- Zika Virus - While primarily a concern in tropical regions, occasional cases in the US have been reported. Symptoms are generally mild and include fever, rash, headache, joint pain, conjunctivitis (red eyes), and muscle pain
- Dengue Fever - More common in tropical and subtropical regions, but can be commonly found in the US in travelers. Symptoms can range from mild to severe and can include fever, headache, muscle and joint pain, vomiting, bleeding and lethargy.

Preventing mosquito bites is the first line of defense against these illnesses. Here are some effective strategies:

1. Use insect repellent and follow the product instructions for proper application
2. Wear protective clothing such as long sleeves, pants, and socks to shield your skin from bites. Light colored clothing is less attractive to mosquitos
3. Install screens on windows and doors to keep mosquitos outside. Repair any holes or tears promptly
4. Eliminate standing water as mosquitos lay eggs there. Regularly empty water from flowerpots, gutters, buckets, pool covers, pet water dishes, and bird baths

To report mosquito infestations or ask questions, call your local Vector Control District. You can look up contact information for your local Vector Control District.

Angelenos in Action

Join Angelenos in Action, a voluntary public health survey that takes less than 1-minute each week and helps us monitor respiratory illness throughout LA County.

Here's how it works:

1. Text "@PROTECT" to (833) 228-3056 to volunteer for our survey or sign up online using this link: <http://tinyurl.com/ys6se6we>.
2. Answer 5 quick questions to sign up.
3. You will be randomized to receive surveys one day a week.
4. Every week on that day, the LA County Department of Public Health will text or email you one YES/NO question to ask how you're feeling.
5. If you feel unwell, you will be asked two more YES/NO questions about symptoms of respiratory illness.

All data is kept completely private. To read more about Angelenos in Action, please click <http://tinyurl.com/bdhjuyje>.

Office of Violence Prevention - GVRO's

A Gun Violence Restraining Order, or GVRO, is a law that was approved by the State of California in 2016. The GVRO allows family members, household members, some employers, colleagues, teachers, and law enforcement to take action to prevent a person who poses a significant risk of harming themselves or others from having or purchasing a gun, ammunition, or magazine for a specified length of time, between 21 days and five years. To find out more on who can request one, and how to request one, please click this link: <http://tinyurl.com/y3hfb575>.

Free Naloxone Clinics

A number of Los Angeles County public libraries are hosting FREE Naloxone Clinics. Naloxone is a lifesaving medication that can reverse the effects of an opioid overdose.

No identification or proof of insurance is required. To find the clinic closest to you, please visit this website: <http://tinyurl.com/y5z2edu3>
